MISSION STATEMENT

Alzheimer's Project, Inc. (AP) exists to provide comfort, support, and assistance to persons with memory disorders and their caregivers in the Big Bend area.

Alzheimer's Project, Inc. is a non-profit organization funded by grants and private donations. Alzheimer's Project, Inc. is dedicated to providing relief to the caregivers of persons suffering from Alzheimer's Disease or other memory impairments. Alzheimer's Project provides caregiver support and respite services to the Alzheimer's community at no cost to the participant. The goal of Alzheimer's Project, Inc. is to keep caregivers healthier, both physically and emotionally, to prolong the abilities of caregivers, and to delay institutionalization of the clients.

ABOUT ALZHEIMER'S PROJECT, INC.

In 1991, guided by Reverend John Fletcher, Saint Paul's United Methodist Church introduced an outreach program we now call Alzheimer's Project, Inc.

Alzheimer's Project, Inc. was first incorporated as the non-profit organization Alzheimer's Project of Tallahassee, Inc., in 1992. In 2011, Alzheimer's Project, Inc. celebrated 20 years of service to the community of Tallahassee and Leon County. In addition to the array of services currently being provided in Leon County, Alzheimer's Project, Inc. has recently increased its social services by providing support groups in Franklin, Gadsden, Jefferson, Wakulla, Madison, Gulf, Jackson, Calhoun, Washington and Taylor Counties.

Alzheimer's Project, Inc.'s main focus has always been providing assistance to caregivers of persons with Alzheimer's disease. By holding day respite programs in ten locations, Alzheimer's Project, Inc. is able to provide much needed respite for caregivers. Respite time gives caregivers the opportunity to take care of themselves, whether they go to the grocery store, attend doctor's appointments or take a nap. It is their time for themselves. Through the years Alzheimer's Project, Inc. has incorporated support groups, counseling, educational opportunities, the Project Lifesaver Program and many more programs and social services for caregivers. Alzheimer's Project provides caregiver support and respite services to the Alzheimer's community at no cost.

Alzheimer's Project, Inc. wishes to thank all of our sponsors and donors throughout the year. Without your help and support, we would be unable to accomplish our mission to provide these services to the Big Bend community at no cost.

ALZHEIMER'S PROJECT, INC.

Alzheimer's Project, Inc. is the Big Bend area's primary resource for Alzheimer-related information, referral, professional consultation and family counseling. All services are provided at no cost.

Day Respite Program

If appropriate, caregivers can bring their loved ones with memory impairment to a day respite program for socialization, activities, and care while they run errands, rest, have lunch with a friend, etc. Respite is provided by trained staff, volunteers, and a Certified Nursing Assistant. Assessment to determine eligibility is required.

Counseling for Caregivers

Spouses, adult children, grandchildren, and siblings can come individually or as a family to receive counseling specific to the needs of caring for a loved one with Alzheimer's. Family members are encouraged to keep a log of challenging situations and problem behaviors, recording what is occurring and when, to assist the counselor in making recommendations that will enhance the quality of life for the person with Alzheimer's and their family. Caregivers are encouraged to contact Alzheimer's Project throughout the disease process.

Support Groups

Alzheimer's Project, Inc. facilitates several monthly support groups for caregivers. Support groups allow caregivers to reach out to, learn from and comfort one another in the knowledge that they are not alone.

AmeriCorps In-Home Respite Program

This program can provide families with up to 8-10 hours of respite a week from a trained volunteer. Volunteers provide companionship for the client, while the caregiver receives a much needed break.

Project Lifesaver Program

Project Lifesaver is a proactive recovery system for individuals with Alzheimer's Disease and Related Disorders who may wander away from the safety of home, work or school. Individuals on the program wear a FM frequency transmitting device. In the event that a client should wander away, the family will be able to contact the Sheriff's Office, which will initiate a search and rescue attempt utilizing specialized equipment to locate individuals on the program.

Information and Referral

Provides caregivers with information about the disease process and links families with appropriate services through Alzheimer's Project, Inc. and other community organizations.

Education and Training for Caregivers

1. Powerful Tools for Caregivers is a six week education series that aims to help caregivers of loved ones with chronic health issues to thrive while caregiving, not just survive. Attendees will learn valuable techniques to assist them while providing care to their care receiver.
 - Reducing personal stress
 - Changing negative self-talk
 - Communicating their needs to family members
 - Recognizing the messages in their emotions and MUCH MORE!
2. Alzheimer's Disease Education and Training Conference is an annual conference for family and professional caregivers. Professionals in the field present on topics relevant to caregiver's and care receiver's needs.

Trainings for Professionals

1. Law Enforcement Training
2. ALF Training
3. Healthcare Professional Training

Publications and Website

Alzheimer's Project, Inc. updates the Alzheimer's Disease Resource Manual every two years for the Big Bend Area and it is provided at no cost to professional and family caregivers. Information about Alzheimer's disease and community resources is also available on our website: www.alzheimersproject.org.

Alzheimer's Project, Inc. ADULT DAY SERVICES

Adult Day Service is respite care provided in a setting where people with memory impairment can receive socialization opportunities, rehabilitation, and supervision during weekday daytime hours. The service encourages independence, decision-making and the use of remaining cognitive abilities.

How I can help Alzheimer's Project, Inc.

Alzheimer's Project, Inc. is funded through donations and memorial contributions from the general public, grants from the Community Human Services Partnership, Advantage Aging Solutions, and the Frueauff Foundation.

All funding that Alzheimer's Project, Inc. receives stays local and is used to provide client services at no cost to caregivers in the Big Bend community. Your support will help to provide families in our community with counseling, support groups, respite opportunities, caregiver education, the Project Lifesaver Program, and this resource manual.

Ways to Give:

Individual Gift: Your individual gift will help ensure continuity of the services Alzheimer's Project, Inc. provides to the community.

Memorial Gift: When someone close to us passes away we want to express our sympathy to the family for their loss. Take the opportunity to express your sympathy and at the same time help Alzheimer's Project, Inc. carry out its mission. We gladly send cards of acknowledgement to the person(s) you specify.

Tribute Gift: You can make a contribution to Alzheimer's Project, Inc. in honor of someone on a special occasion such as their birthday, anniversary, or holiday. When you include the contact information for the person to whom you are giving tribute, a card acknowledging your gift will be sent to them.

DEMENTIA VS. NORMAL AGING

As people grow older, they worry that forgetting the phone number of a best friend or the name of a person they should know must mean they are becoming demented or getting Alzheimer's disease. Forgetfulness due to aging or increased stress is not dementia.

"Dementia" is an encompassing term to define the loss of cognitive functions such as thinking, remembering, and reasoning of sufficient severity to interfere with a person's daily functioning. Dementia is not a disease in itself, but a group of symptoms. When a person has dementia, he/she will lose the ability to think, reason and remember and will inevitably need assistance with activities of daily living such as dressing and bathing. Changes in personality and mood are also symptoms of dementia. Some dementias are treatable or reversible. Alzheimer's disease is the most common form of untreatable, irreversible dementia.

WARNING SIGNS OF DEMENTIA

- Memory loss that disrupts daily life
- Repetition - stories, words, etc.
- Language problems - struggle to remember a word
- Personality changes - sudden mood swings
- Disorientation and confusion - lost in familiar surroundings
- Lack of hygiene
- Odd behavior - placing objects in odd and inappropriate places
- Confusion with time or place

ALZHEIMER'S DISEASE (AD)

HISTORY

Alzheimer's disease (AD) was first discovered in 1906 by a German doctor named Alois Alzheimer. It is a disorder of the brain, causing damage to brain tissue over a period of time. The disease can linger from two to twenty years before death results. AD is a progressive, debilitating and eventually fatal neurological illness affecting 5.4 million Americans. Alzheimer's disease is the most common form of dementia.

STATISTICS

In America alone, Alzheimer's disease affects 5.8 million people. A new individual is diagnosed with the disease every 65 seconds. It is estimated that more than 540,000 Floridians have Alzheimer's disease or some other form of dementia. For those with the disease, a diagnosis of Alzheimer's can mean from 2 to 20 years of decline. For their families and caregivers, diagnosis is just the beginning of an increasingly heavy physical, emotional and financial burden. The Alzheimer's Association (www.alz.org) states that Alzheimer's disease is now the 6th leading cause of death in America for those 65 and over.

Alzheimer's disease is characterized clinically by early memory impairment, followed by language and perceptual problems. This disease can affect anyone: it has no economic, social, racial or national barriers.

From Alzheimer's Association 2018 Facts and Figures

CAUSES

There is no known cause for Alzheimer's disease. Alzheimer's disease may be sporadic or genetic. The disease causes gradual death of brain tissue due to biochemical problems inside individual brain cells. The symptoms are progressive, but there is great variation in the rate of change from one person to another. In the early stages of Alzheimer's, an individual may appear completely healthy, but the disease is slowly destroying the brain cells. The hidden process damages the brain in several ways:

- patches of brain cells degenerate (neuritic plaques);
- nerve endings that transmit messages become tangled (neurofibrillary tangles);
- there is a reduction in acetylcholine, an important brain chemical (neurotransmitter);
- spaces in the brain develop - ventricles become larger and filled with granular fluid;
- the size and shape of the brain alters - the cortex appears to shrink and decay (atrophy).

Understandably, as the brain continues to degenerate, there is a comparable loss in mental functioning. Since the brain controls all of our bodily functions, people in the later stages of Alzheimer's will have difficulty walking, talking, swallowing and controlling bladder and bowel functions. They become frail and prone to upper respiratory infections such as pneumonia. Age is the most important risk factor.

DIAGNOSIS

There are numerous conditions that present with symptoms of dementia. Conditions such as stroke, vascular diseases, toxins, nutritional deficiencies, infections and depression can all have symptoms that simulate dementia. Ten to fifteen percent of these conditions can be well managed or cured. For this reason, it is most important that a thorough examination be done in order to rule out any treatable condition. The diagnosis of Alzheimer's disease is determined by excluding other conditions that may be responsible for producing the symptoms such as memory loss, confusion and personality change.

A definite diagnosis of Alzheimer's disease is still only possible during autopsy when the hallmark plaques and tangles can be detected. However, with techniques now available, physicians and patients can count on 85 to 90 percent accuracy, according to studies in which clinical diagnosis was later confirmed by autopsy. Clinicians diagnose "probable Alzheimer's disease" using criteria established in 1984 by the National Institute of Neurological and Communicative Disorders and Stroke and the Alzheimer's Disease and Related Disorders Association guidelines.

The most effective way to diagnose AD is through a Memory Disorder Clinic (MDC) such as the ones funded by the State of Florida. The clinic evaluation is a team approach to diagnosis of memory impairment. Whether the diagnosis is Alzheimer's disease, multi-infarct dementia, Parkinson's disease or any other form of dementia, the MDC team of professionals assist patients and family members with services and resources specific to their situation. The evaluation typically includes:

- Physical exam
- Blood work
- Neurological exam (may require CT or MRI)
- Neuropsychological testing
- Psychosocial assessment
- Pharmacological evaluation

Once the comprehensive evaluation is complete a summary evaluation conference is conducted with the client and caregiver and MDC Social Worker. A community resource management plan is offered to the client and caregiver, and a full evaluation report is sent to the patient and referring physician.

RESEARCH

New research is continually being performed to determine the exact cause of Alzheimer's disease, which is still not known. Some drugs and over-the-counter vitamins and/or medications have been introduced to alleviate some of the symptoms of Alzheimer's disease. Nothing has been found to "cure" the disease, but some medications may help improve a person's communication skills and ability to perform activities of daily living.

ALZHEIMER'S DISEASE - STAGES OF PROGRESSION

Alzheimer's disease can be characterized as early, middle, or late stage. In general, most patients gradually progress through the stages but not at a predictable rate. The range of the course of the disease is two to twenty years. NOTE: Stages may overlap and everyone progresses through these stages differently.

First Stage: This is a very subtle stage usually not identified by either the impaired person or the family as the beginning signs of the disease. Subtle changes in memory and language, along with some confusion, occur at this time. It is easy to dismiss or excuse performance deficiencies at this stage.

- Forgetfulness/memory loss
- Impaired judgment
- Trouble with routines
- Lessening of initiative
- Disorientation of time and place
- Depression
- Fearfulness
- Personality change
- Apraxia (forgetting how to use tools and equipment)
- Anomia (unable to come up with the right word or a person's name)

Second Stage: As Stage 1 moves into Stage 2, there is usually a particular, significant event that helps the family (and impaired person) recognize that something is really wrong. At this time, a doctor is typically consulted to diagnose the problem.

- Poor short-term memory
- Wandering (searching for "home")
- Language difficulties
- Increased disorientation
- Social withdrawal
- More spontaneity, fewer inhibitions
- Agitation and restlessness, fidgeting, pacing
- Developing inability to attach meaning to sensory perceptions, i.e. taste, touch, smell, sight, hearing
- Inability to think abstractly
- Severe sleep disturbances and/or sleepiness
- Convulsive seizures may develop
- Repetitive actions and speech
- Hallucinations
- Delusions

Third (Final) Stage: This stage is the terminal stage and may last for months or years. The individual will eventually need total personal care. They may no longer be able to speak or recognize their closest relatives.

- Little or no memory
- Inability to recognize themselves in a mirror
- No recognition of family or friends
- Great difficulty communicating
- Difficulty with coordinated movements
- Becoming emaciated in spite of adequate diet
- Complete loss of control of all bodily functions
- Increased frailty
- Complete dependence

RELATED DEMENTIAS

As a reminder, dementia is not a disease in itself, but rather a group of symptoms. It is a clinical term signifying the loss of intellectual functions such as thinking, remembering and reasoning, of sufficient severity to interfere with a person's daily functioning. Many dementias are treatable and reversible. Alzheimer's disease is the most common form of untreatable, irreversible dementia.

Multi-Infarct Dementia (MID): In MID, blockages in the small arteries of the brain cause a loss of circulation beyond the blocked area. When the blood supply is blocked off for a long time, the cells die. Individuals with a history of arrhythmias, irregular heart rhythms, heart disease or high blood pressure may be particularly vulnerable to this type of problem. This may be referred to as a series of small strokes. (Adapted from: Cohen, Donna, PhD and Eisdorfer, Carl PhD, MD: The Loss of Self, 1986.)

Parkinson's Disease: Parkinson's Disease is a neurodegenerative disorder that affects predominately the dopamine-producing neurons in specific areas of the brain. Progression of symptoms are variable for everyone, but can include resting tremor, limb rigidity, gait and balance problems as well as bradykinesia (slowing of movement). Other symptoms can include problems with speech (voice volume) and cognitive changes. According to the Parkinson's Foundation, cognitive impairment affects many people living with Parkinson's disease. Cognitive impairment can range from mild cognitive impairment (MCI) to more severe dementia symptoms. Depression, anxiety, apathy and hallucination are also common non-motor symptoms of Parkinson's disease. (Parkinson's Foundation, 2019)

Lewy Body Disease: Lewy body disease presents symptoms similar to Parkinson's and Alzheimer's diseases. It is an irreversible brain disorder caused by protein deposits in the brain cells. Lewy body disease can be characterized by an early development of hallucinations and difficulty with motor skills. Individuals with Lewy body disease are often sensitive to the side effects of strong tranquilizers such as an anti-psychotic medication. (Heilman, MD, Doty, PhD, Stewart, MD, Bowers, PhD, Gonzalez-Rothi, PhD: Helping People with Progressive Memory Disorders: A Guide for You and Your Family, 1996.)

Progressive Supranuclear Palsy (PSP): Problems that are common symptoms of PSP are unsteady gait, backward falls because of poor balance, visual disturbances, slurred speech and forgetfulness. The average duration from onset to death is approximately six years. All patients with supranuclear palsy have downward gaze and often dementia. (Maher, E.R., BSC, MRCP and A.J. Lees, MD, MRCP: Neurology, July 1986.)

Binswanger's Disease: Binswanger's disease is caused by a decrease in blood flow to the central portion of the brain. Motivation and memory loss are usually the first symptoms of this disease, followed by decreased cognitive functioning. Other characteristics of Binswanger's disease include depression, sudden outbursts of anger, or restlessness and language problems as the disease progresses. (Heilman, MD, Doty, PhD, Stewart, MD, Bowers, PhD, Gonzalez-Rothi, PhD: Helping People with Progressive Memory Disorders: A Guide for You and Your Family, 1996.)

Pick's Disease: Another progressive dementia, Pick's disease affects the frontal and temporal lobes of the brain. Initial signs of this disease are lack of motivation, personality changes, impulsive or spontaneous behavior, amnesia and/or speech difficulties. Medications can help manage some of the problem behavior. (Heilman, MD, Doty, PhD, Stewart, MD, Bowers, PhD, Gonzalez-Rothi, PhD: Helping People with Progressive Memory Disorders: A Guide for You and Your Family, 1996.)

Creutzfeldt – Jakob Disease (CJD): CJD is a rare, fatal brain disorder believed to be caused by prions. The disease causes a mental deterioration and a variety of neurological symptoms, and usually leads to death within a year of onset. CJD can produce memory loss, motivational-intentional disorders or cognitive impairment. In addition, it is not uncommon for a person with CJD to experience jerking muscle movements, leg and arm spasms, extra sensitive reactions to loud noises and lack of coordination. (Heilman, MD, Doty, PhD, Stewart, MD, Bowers, PhD, Gonzalez-Rothi, PhD: Helping People with Progressive Memory Disorders: A Guide for You and Your Family, 1996.)

Corticobasal Degeneration: Also known as Rebeitz Syndrome, corticobasal degeneration is one of the uncommon forms of progressive dementia. It is caused by changes in the brain cells of the cortex (the cerebrum) and the basal ganglia. Symptoms include apraxia, rigidity, involuntary movements, dystonia, the 'alien limb' sign, dysarthria and subnuclear disorder of the eye movement. Mental impairment occurs late in the course of the disease but some patients lose language early. This disease usually affects people in their 60s to 80s. Males and females are equally affected. (Rossor, Martin, MD, MA, FRCP: C.A.N.D.I.D. Counseling and Diagnosis in Dementia, The National Hospital for Neurology and Neurosurgery, London 1998. Heilman, MD, Doty, PhD, Stewart, MD, Bowers, PhD, Gonzalez-Rothi, PhD: Helping People with Progressive Memory Disorders: A Guide for You and Your Family, 1996).

Huntington's Disease: Huntington's disease affects the basal ganglia and frontal lobe areas of the brain. The disease is characterized by emotional changes, like depression, and sporadic muscle activity. Late in the disease process, persons experience progressive dementia with bouts of amnesia and lack of motivation. Huntington's disease affects nearly 25,000 people in the United States. Onset usually occurs during middle age. (Heilman, MD, Doty, PhD, Stewart, MD, Bowers, PhD, Gonzalez-Rothi, PhD: Helping People with Progressive Memory Disorders: A Guide for You and Your Family, 1996).

SUGGESTIONS FOR THE CAREGIVER

PLANNING AHEAD

A CHECKLIST ON FAMILY MATTERS

As memory changes over time, people are less able to manage family and business decisions. The following checklist may help caregivers organize these family matters.

LEGAL MATTERS

Contact an attorney about:

- Durable Power of Attorney
- Guardianship
- Trust Funds, irrevocable trusts
- Will (Is it current? Do you know where it is?)
- Legal changes that occur when a person moves to another state

Advance Directives:

- Florida Living Will
- Florida Designation of a Health Care Surrogate
- Do Not Resuscitate Order

INSURANCE

Know policy schedule, location and agent. CHECK WAIVERS!

- House
- Car
- Theft
- Life insurance
- Veteran's medical
- Disability
- Medical
- Medicare
- Medicaid
- Long Term Care

FAMILY BUSINESS

Someone must handle regular bills and other financial affairs, such as:

- Utilities
- Telephone
- Rent or mortgage
- Car
- Television/cable
- Medicines (dose, location, assistance/reminders)
- Family health records (medications, allergies, major illnesses/surgeries)
- Personal documents (birth, marriage, divorce, adoption, citizenship, military)
- Grocery shopping, cooking, cleaning, laundry, yard
- Security box or safe (location, key or combination?)
- Real estate (location of property and deeds, co-owners)
- Bank matters/accounts (location, co-signer?)
- Checking, savings, money market, fund bearer, IRA, CD, safety deposit box
- Credit card records
- Tax records
- Social Security
- SSA/SSI check (mailed to home or direct deposit)
- Change of representative payee
- If under age 65, social security disability

IN THE EVENT OF DEATH

- Summary list of assets
- Funeral arrangements
- Cemetery lot (deed and location)

Advance Directives: General term used to describe those documents that provide instructions to caregivers and professionals, and provide a legal means for your business to be carried out and decisions to be made for you in the event of your incapacity.

FINANCIAL TOOLS

Durable Power of Attorney: (Chapter 709 Florida Statutes) A document in which an individual (principal) designates another (attorney in fact) to act on his or her behalf with regard to a wide range of transactions, especially financial transactions. As long as its durability is clearly stated, Florida law allows the attorney in fact to continue to act on behalf of the principal even after the principal's incapacity. A principal MUST have capacity to sign the Durable Power of Attorney. Note: Effective October 1, 2011, significant changes were made to Florida's Durable Power of Attorney laws and durable power of attorney forms found on the internet or purchased from office supply stores or website may not be valid if they do not meet the specific requirements set forth under the new laws. Please contact your attorney for more information.

Trust: (Chapter 736 Florida Statutes) A right to use or get the benefit of property or money that is held by one person (trustee) for the benefit of another (beneficiary). The trustee continues to manage the trust property even after a beneficiary has been determined to be incapacitated.

HEALTH CARE TOOLS

Health Care Surrogate: (Chapter 765 Florida Statutes) The individual (surrogate) designated by an individual (principal) to make health care decisions for him or her in the event of incapacity.

Health Care Proxy: (Chapter 765 Florida Statutes) The individual designated by Florida law to make healthcare decisions for an individual in the event of the individual's incapacity.

Living Will: (Chapter 765 Florida Statutes) A document announcing an individual's intent and wish regarding the health care he or she would like to receive or would like withdrawn in the event the individual should be found to have an end stage condition or be found to be in a permanent vegetative state.

Do Not Resuscitate Order (DNR): (Chapter 401 Florida Statutes) A medical order instructing paramedics, EMS, and other medical personnel not to resuscitate an individual in the event of cardiac or respiratory arrest.

Anatomical Gift: (Chapter 765 Florida Statutes) The individual provides for the donation or his or her body, organs or tissue upon his or her death.

GUARDIANSHIP

Designation of Pre-Need Guardian: (Florida Statute 744.3045) An individual's written declaration naming another to serve as his or her guardian in the event of his or her incapacity.

Guardianship: (Chapter 744 Florida Statutes) A guardianship is an extraordinary legal procedure in which a court appoints someone to assist a ward in the event of the ward's incapacity. A guardianship is usually instituted because there are none of the other planning tools discussed above available.

HEALTH CARE ADVANCE CARE PLANNING

For Those Living with Dementia and Their Caregivers

What is Health Care Advance Care Planning? Adults at any stage in life have the right to make decisions about what kinds of healthcare they would wish to have or not have. If you become ill and unable to speak for yourself, would loved ones and healthcare providers know your wishes? Advance care planning is a process of discovering what you would want, discussing those wishes with loved ones and your doctor--and ideally, putting those wishes in writing. Those documents (called advance directives) can then speak for you if you are unable to speak for yourself--and provide direction to health care professionals and loved ones.

What are the benefits of advance care planning? For many people, having their wishes and values respected, particularly in serious illness or at the end of life, is important to a sense of dignity. Loved ones, who otherwise can be faced with the challenge of not knowing what you would want, can feel less stress and more confident in making decisions when your wishes are known.

Are there different kinds of advance care planning documents? Yes, there are three basic considerations. First, who would you choose to carry out your care decisions (name a person as your health care proxy). Second, what would those decisions be if you were determined to be at the end of life (completing a "living will"). Third, a broader document that can include a health care proxy, a living will type declaration, and attention to personal, emotional and spiritual sources of comfort. The Five Wishes document is an example of this broader approach.

Why is advance care planning particularly important for persons living with dementia? Some chronic and progressive illnesses can cloud judgment over time. If you have dementia or another condition that can interfere with thinking clearly, it is a good idea to start your advance care planning as soon as possible. While it may be more difficult, it is also more important and may give you and those you love greater peace of mind.

Why is advance care planning particularly important for persons who care for those living with dementia? Caregivers for loved ones with dementia are encouraged to complete their own advance care planning for several important reasons. First, to model the importance of advance care planning and to reinforce that it applies to everyone. Second, to name a person who might care for or coordinate care for the person with dementia if the caregiver becomes unable for any reason. And third, to actively care for themselves by expressing their own preferences for medical care, rather than ignoring their own needs.

What are some resources for helping someone living with dementia and their caregivers discuss and complete their advance care directives?

COMMON PROBLEMS WITH DEMENTIA

Delusions

- Suspiciousness: accusing others of stealing their belongings
- Fear that people are “out to get them”
- Fear that their caregiver is going to abandon them (results in AD person never leaving caregiver’s side)
- Current living space is not “home”

Hallucinations

- Seeing or hearing people or things that are not present

Repetitive actions or questions

- Repetitive questions or actions, such as wringing a towel or asking the same questions over and over and over again

Wandering

- Pacing
- Generally feeling uncomfortable or restless
- Increased agitation in late afternoon/ early evening (“sundowning”)

Losing things / Hiding things

- Does not remember where items are or has hidden things so that people don’t “steal” them

Inappropriate sexual behavior

- Person with AD loses inhibitions

Agnosia: inability to recognize common people or objects

- A wife of forty years becomes a stranger to the person with AD; he might even think she is the hired help
- Might not recognize a spatula or the purpose of the spatula; cannot verbalize the name or purpose of the object

Apraxia: loss of ability to perform purposeful motor movements

- Cannot tie a shoe or manipulate buttons on a shirt

(Adapted from the Alzheimer Resource Center, Orlando; The 36 Hour Day, Nancy Mace and Peter Rabins, MD, 1991; and the State of Florida Department of Elder Affairs Alzheimer’s Disease Training Manual, 1997.)

Note: Not ALL patients will experience these problems.

HANDLING CHALLENGING BEHAVIORS

One of the most difficult challenges for caregivers is how to handle some of the behaviors that Alzheimer's can cause. Symptoms such as delusions, hallucinations, angry outbursts, suspiciousness, failure to recognize familiar people and places are often the most upsetting behaviors for families. The following points may help in responding to disturbing symptoms.

First, try to understand if there is a precipitating factor causing the behavior. Were there household changes, too much noise or activity, or was the daily routine upset? Time of day can also affect behavior ("sundowning"). Being aware of these factors can help to better plan activities or anticipate problems

- Keep tasks, directions and routine simple without being condescending
- Always give the person plenty of time to respond
- Attempt to remain calm and remind yourself that the behavior is due to the disease
- Avoid arguing
- Write down the answers to frequently asked questions; then remind them to look at the message
- Reduce environmental noise: television, radio, and too many people talking
- Use distraction when unacceptable behavior starts: bring them into a different room; start talking about childhood or another favorite topic; show them magazines; ask them to help you do something simple like dusting or sweeping
- Do not overreact or scold for problem behavior; redirect or distract
- Avoid denying hallucinations; try non-committal comments like, "You spoke with your mother; I miss my mother too"
- Be sure to inform physician of hallucinations, no matter how tame
- Restless behavior or pacing is usually unavoidable, however you can make the environment safe by installing locks that are above reach, removing unnecessary obstacles and making sure the person is wearing some kind of identification

WANDERING

The following information on wandering is provided by the Alzheimer's Foundation of America (AFA). For more information, call their toll-free hotline at 1-866-AFA-8484, or visit them on the Web at www.alzfdn.org.

One-quarter to one-half of all individuals with dementia will wander, most commonly during the middle stage of the disease. To assure safety, individuals should be assessed to determine possible causes of these episodes, and treated with behavioral, medical or pharmacological interventions.

Tips:

- Do not leave a person with dementia home alone.
- Monitor and record the individual's wandering patterns—frequency, duration, time of day, etc. For example, if wandering occurs first thing in the morning, they might be hungry; in the late afternoon or early evening, they might be experiencing "sundowning"; and during the night, they might need to use the bathroom.
- Consult with a physician to see if medications can help. Individuals who wander as a result of delusions or hallucinations may require psychotropic medications.
- Provide recreational activities—music therapy, physical exercise or movies, for example—to reduce boredom, under-stimulation or lack of socialization that prompts wandering.
- Ensure that the individual is well fed, well hydrated and using the bathroom since individuals may wander to fulfill these basic needs. Consider setting a schedule.
- Reduce environmental stimuli like loud music, screaming or overcrowding that might spark this behavior.
- Outfit the individual with an identification bracelet, and put some form of identification in every jacket, pocketbook or other favorite article.
- Obtain a wristband transmitter, such as those used by Project Lifesaver, to more easily track wanderers, or another ID bracelet such as the interactive version of a Road ID (www.roadID.com). See “Wanderer Information” later in the Handbook for information about access to these programs.
- Have a current photo readily available and find out about leaving one on file at the police department.

- Secure doors in a way that is difficult to open.
- Add electronic chimes or doorbells so a caregiver is alerted if the individual attempts to exit.
- Identify bathrooms and other rooms with colorful signs to re-orient individuals.
- Post a large sign on or near exits that says "stop" or "do not enter."
- Mask exit doors with a curtain.
- Place a black mat or paint a black space by an exit, which may appear to be an impassable hole to those with dementia. Likewise, a large line, strip of tape or Velcro™ may act as a barrier.
- Provide familiar objects, such as family photographs, slippers and a quilt, to an individual living in a long-term care facility to make it feel like home.

9 WAYS TO HANDLE ALZHEIMER'S AND SEXUALLY INAPPROPRIATE BEHAVIOR

Inappropriate sexual behavior in dementia is difficult to handle. Inappropriate sexual behavior is a disturbing thing that can happen when someone has Alzheimer's or dementia. It can be one of the most challenging behaviors to handle because it often makes caregivers feel uncomfortable, embarrassed, or frightened. We explain what causes this behavior, share 9 ways to help you cope, and give plenty of ideas and examples.

What causes sexually inappropriate behavior in dementia?

It might seem strange that someone you once knew as proper or respectful might suddenly be showing sexually inappropriate behavior. The most important thing to understand is that this behavior is caused by damage in their brain, it's not something they're doing on purpose. Dementia affects parts of the brain that control a person's ability to control their own responses. That's why it's important to learn how to distract and redirect them to more appropriate activities.

A person with dementia could act in sexually inappropriate ways toward their spouse, their own children, professional caregivers, or strangers. They are likely to be confused about who a person is or might have forgotten that they already have a spouse. They may become angry or upset if they feel rejected.

Inappropriate sexual behavior could be caused by a need to feel intimacy again, needing comfort, or being bored. Sometimes, people with dementia may even take off their clothes or masturbate in public. This could be caused by disorientation – not knowing they’re not in a private place. Or, it could be because they’re uncomfortable or need to use the toilet.

9 Ways to Cope with Alzheimer’s and Sexually Inappropriate Behavior

Each person will respond differently to these responses and interventions. That’s why we’ve included lots of suggestions and tips – experiment to see which ones work for your older adult.

1. Manage inappropriate behavior when it happens

- Stay calm and be patient.
- Gently but firmly tell the person that the behavior is inappropriate.
- Match your body language to your words – frown and shake your head. People with dementia are better at reading nonverbal cues.
- Maintain consistent, firm boundaries. Don’t accidentally encourage inappropriate behavior by sending mixed signals, like briefly allowing the behavior one time and then reacting negatively the next time. Be consistently firm every time, saying “No, stop. I don’t like that.” or “Stop, that’s not right.”
- Distract them and redirect to a positive activity. To distract, ask a question, turn on the TV, or offer a snack. To redirect, turn on some music they like, go for a walk, bring out their favorite hobby
- Move your older adult to another location. This takes them away from what’s triggering their behavior. Guide them to a quiet area in a public place or to their bedroom at home.
- If nothing else works, shock them a bit by raising your voice and firmly saying “No!” Grab their hands and put them back in their lap. Look them in the eye, frown, and shake your head to let them know this behavior will not be tolerated.

2. Explain sexual behavior to other people

- Let family, friends, and visitors know ahead of time that inappropriate behavior or sexual remarks might happen and that it's caused by the damage to their brain from Alzheimer's or dementia.
- Calmly ask other adults to excuse their behavior or advise them to step back a bit.
- Keep a little space between your older adult and other people. When you walk them into a room, leave enough space so they can't easily touch someone, especially if they tend to grab.

3. Identify triggers and try to prevent the inappropriate behavior from starting

- Keep their hands occupied with a fidget activity or sensory activity.
- Provide alternatives to cuddling – a soft blanket, stuffed animal, or doll can satisfy the need to touch.
- Boredom can also cause sexual behavior. Keep your older adult happily occupied with different types of engaging activities.
- Keep a caregiving journal of the inappropriate behaviors to figure out the triggers. You might notice that mom lifts her skirt or dad touches himself when they need to use the bathroom.

4. Make it difficult for them to remove clothing

- To prevent spontaneous undressing, get specially designed clothing that closes in the back so it's difficult for them to take their clothes off.

5. Talk with a doctor, nurse, or other healthcare professional

- Talk with their doctor, a nurse, or another healthcare professional. They may be able to figure out what's causing the behavior and how to treat it.

6. Lean on trusted family or friends

- Consider talking with a trusted family member or friend. That gives you an ally in your circle who will be aware of what's happening and can offer emotional support.

7. Join a caregiver support group

- You're not alone in dealing with sensitive issues like this. Caregiver support groups are an excellent source of support. If you're shy about speaking about sex in person, you might be more comfortable in an online support group.

- Memory People on Facebook is a wonderful group and also has a women's only subgroup where members feel more comfortable discussing sex.

8. Spouses can adapt relationships and find other ways to fulfill the need to be close

Sex between you and your spouse with dementia is a complex topic. It's important to recognize that sexual desires and drives might change for both of you. In the early stages, encourage them to discuss their feelings and emphasize the value of your relationship with or without sex. A therapist could also help with these discussions.

Additional tips for spouses:

- Give extra reassurance and physical attention through activities like snuggling while watching TV, giving hugs or a massage, dancing together.
- Showing affection through touching or kissing could also give the comfort and security that comes from being with the person they trust.
- If it feels right for you, consider separate sleeping arrangements.

9. Prepare for sexual behavior in assisted living or memory care

- Ask the assisted living community about their policy on sexual relationships and behaviors. It's especially important to discuss policies related to sexual abuse and a resident's ability to give meaningful consent.

GENERAL CAREGIVING ADVICE

Safety in the Home

The caregiver must assume responsibility for the safety of the AD patient and must always be aware of any situation that could be life threatening. Some of the things to consider are:

- Install sliding bolt locks at tops or bottoms of outside doors to reduce the possibility of wandering; AD patients seldom look up or down and would overlook such locks
- Add safety locks on all windows
- Add safety gates on stairs
- Lock away all medicines
- Set hot water heaters at temperatures that would not cause a serious burn
- Patients should be under observation when in the kitchen because of all dangers lurking there; use large labels on as many things as possible for easy identification
- Cover the burners of the stove

- Remove throw rugs from the floors and minimize electric cords
- Remove guns, knives and all other weapons from the home
- Supervise or eliminate the use of power tools

Safety out of the Home

- Identification bracelet
- Car doors with child safety locks
- Do not leave the person alone in the car
- Add a property fence to secure the area around the home

Nutrition Tips

The caregiver will increasingly be more responsible for ensuring adequate nutritional intake as a lack of appetite is not uncommon. Eating patterns should be observed for preferences, likes and dislikes. Some things to consider include:

- Offer as great a variety of food items as possible to keep the person interested in eating
- When use of eating utensils is forgotten, prepare finger foods; it is much easier to serve one food at a time
- If your loved one is having trouble holding a fork or spoon, insert a foam hair curler over the handle to make the grip easier for them to hold
- Encourage the drinking of liquids; oftentimes the person will forget to ask

Physical Care

The caregiver needs to be aware of continuing physical health needs and personal health care needs including:

- Regular medical checkups
- Regular dental checkups and good dental hygiene; it is always best to be with your family member during medical and dental checkups to ensure proper reporting of information
- Exercise is very important to caregivers and care recipients, and can include walking, dancing, or simple exercises to stretch muscles
- Check your loved one's feet often for shoes that are ill fitting or ingrown toenails
- Encourage bathing and, as needed, supervise bathing

Medications

- When possible, use only one pharmacy so that interactions can be easily checked
- Have a written list of medications (including strength and directions) being used by the individual in that person's wallet and visible in the home
- Do not use nonprescription products without consulting a pharmacist
- Ask the pharmacist to instruct you on the appropriate time for medication administration to minimize side effects, drug interactions, and noncompliance
- Check nonprescription products for expiration dates, and appropriately dispose of medications that are not being used anymore (contact your pharmacist for guidelines)
- Assist or totally oversee medication administration to minimize unintentional under- and overdosing

Mental Health

Due to the disease process, your loved one may exhibit uncharacteristic beliefs and behaviors. As the caregiver:

- Try to resist contradicting, arguing, or trying to reason with the patient as it isn't likely to help and may make matters worse
- Try to remain calm in situations that are frustrating -- it will help the patient
- Try to distract the patient, perhaps by redirecting their attention to a pleasant memory from their distant past that is still familiar to them
- It helps to mention names frequently
- It is very important to reassure the patient often because of their insecurities -- a hug or a loving touch or smile can often do more to soothe the emotions of both the patient and caregiver than anything else
- The most important advice is for families to keep surroundings familiar and have the same routine followed every day as much as possible

Driving

Taking the car away from a loved one is one of the harder things a family must do. However, it is inevitable and the sooner it is done, the safer everyone is. While driving a car, a person with AD can harm not only themselves but innocent people as well. It is possible to stop the person from driving while keeping his or her dignity intact. The following tips may help with this difficult process.

- Agree as a family that the person should no longer drive
- Try the honest, group approach: “Dad, due to the memory problems and slower reaction time we all know you've been experiencing, we'd like you to give up driving”
- Ask your physician, lawyer or trusted family friend to put the request in writing
- Replace car keys with other keys that will not operate machinery
- Take the car in for repairs; give the mechanic instructions not to release the car to anyone but you
- Do not leave the person alone in the car with the engine on or the keys in the ignition
- Disable the vehicle
- Remove the car

Safe-Proofing Your Surroundings

The following information on safety is provided by the Alzheimer's Foundation of America (AFA). For more resource information, call their toll-free hotline at 1-866-AFA-8484, or visit them on the web at www.alzfdn.org.

Turning a home into one that is dementia-friendly can help minimize accidents and maximize well-being. It can also give peace of mind to caregivers and reduce stress for at-home and long distance caregivers.

Act before a crisis. In safe-proofing surroundings, it is best to take preventative steps, rather than scramble around to solve an immediate crisis. This way, options can be more carefully weighed. The challenge is balancing a desire to keep individuals with dementia as functional as possible against the hazards posed by cognitive decline, including poor judgment, difficulty with spatial perception and inability to react appropriately. Observing an individual's patterns and how they navigate their environment, looking for red flags, and pinpointing causes and effects are all very informative.

Professionals or caregivers themselves should survey a home three times, progressing in security at each inspection. Look for safe, safer and safest.

- Safe involves detecting basic dangers and fixing or removing those items, such as movable furniture that people wrongly rely on for support, chairs that blend in with the walls behind them, and loose extension cords and telephone wires;
- Safer means locating ways to minimize injury in the event of accidents, like replacing glass tables with furniture that has blunt edges, and locating a soft rubber mat by the bed in case of a fall; and
- Safest is maximizing access to help in an emergency, such as installing a monitoring device.

Look at critical areas. Since those with dementia need a quiet, orderly environment, it is critical to address factors such as noise, color and lighting. Modifying kitchens and bathrooms and taking steps to deter wandering are primary concerns. The key is to pay special attention to lighting, furnishings, textures, changes in elevation, handrails, and types of flooring, and to remove hazardous clutter from floors, stairways, etc. Often, small changes can make big differences.

Be creative. Products do not have to be taken at face value; rather, consider a person's specific condition and further adapt products for an even greater sense of security. Always keep in mind that, with this progressive disease, what works one day may not work the next.

Walk gently. While many changes sound easy enough, convincing the at-home caregiver and/or their loved one to alter their environment can be the hard part. Often, their reluctance boils down to a sense of shame or the feeling that many assistive devices are unattractive. Look for designs and assistive devices that give people independent functioning while maintaining privacy and dignity. In presenting home safety features to those with dementia, be delicate. Since most people do not welcome change, caregivers may need to broach the subject on several occasions and make gentle suggestions. Also, try to include the person with dementia in the decision-making process. And use language that empowers the person to agree to the safety features for someone else's sake, such as, "It's not for you; it's for me so I don't worry so much." Another effective strategy is to call solutions by another name - gifts.

Special Problems

The following information on special problems was excerpted with permission from “As Memory Fades...The Caregivers Challenge Begins,” Geri R. Hall, Ph.D., ARNP, University of Iowa College of Nursing, June 2004.

The following section deals with approaches to problems that are commonly encountered when caring for people with memory loss. While there are no definitive answers to these problems, the approaches suggested may help.

1. Bathing

Many patients go through a phase where they either refuse to bathe or tell you they have already finished their bath. This can be frustrating, especially if the patient develops body odor. The first (and most important) thing to remember is that no one ever died from not bathing. Many older adults are modest about disrobing, or become afraid of bathwater or the shower. Some of the following suggestions have been helpful:

- Let the patient choose the time of day to bathe
- Remind him/her of a special occasion they must be clean for (e.g., “We can’t go out for lunch until you bathe”)
- Associate a pleasant experience with the bath (such as a chocolate treat or music)
- Make sure you check the temperature of the bathwater or shower to prevent freezing or scalding
- Color the bathwater or use bubble bath
- Try a hand-held shower head so water does not hit the person’s head
- Allow the person to bathe with underwear on
- Sing during bath-time to relieve the tension or have some soft music in the background
- Compliment the patient after the bath
- Don’t take refusals to bathe personally

2. Wearing the same clothing day after day

This is an indication that the patient cannot handle change and is normal for people with memory loss. Purchase several identical outfits when shopping. Then, when the person takes one set of dirty clothing off, remove it and replace with an identical set of clean clothing. Make sure you have a picture of your loved one in this clothing in case they wander. You will be able to tell the police exactly what the person is wearing.

3. Hiding things

Hiding and losing things are the most frustrating aspect of the disease for many caregivers. Understand that hiding things often represents a concern about theft. Things will be hidden. It is important to minimize the loss of money and valuables.

- Remove valuables from the house whenever possible. Remember, these possessions still belong to the patient and cannot legally be dispersed using the patient's will. Take larger valuables such as the family crystal, silverware, and china, and pack them away. Label the carton "books," or something that does not attract attention and place them in a safe area, such as a little-used closet or basement.
- Place jewelry not used daily in a safety deposit box.
- Take jewelry worn daily and have it appraised. Have the jeweler remove the most valuable stones and place them in a safety deposit box. Replace the valuable stones with cubic zirconium and return to the patient.
- Never ever send jewelry with the patient to a nursing home or assisted living facility.
- Put "clappers" on house and car keys so they beep when lost
- Get to know where some of the more common hiding places are. Families report hiding money, keys, jewelry, medications, and many other things in the following locations:
 - under the mattress or under pillows
 - in the pages of books
 - in the hems of curtains
 - under the paper in back of pictures or mirrors
 - in food containers
 - in the freezer
 - behind bricks in the basement
 - in breakfront cabinets
 - wadded in tissues inside of toilet paper cardboard cylinders
 - in the trash

It is important to remember that things will be lost. Make sure that there are duplicates of keys and other items. Also, losing the car keys is an excellent way to have your loved one stop driving. This is one example where you may decide to let the keys “stay lost,” and not volunteer another set.

4. Fear of abandonment/refusing help

Many patients refuse to go to adult day programs or to allow in-home respite services. Patients become dependent on their caregivers to remember when they can't and become nervous and upset when their caregiver is not around. This can become so severe that the caregiver is unable to have even a moment alone, including to go to the bathroom.

The best defense against this is a good offense. Have your loved attend a day respite program. Have extra help in the home as early as possible, usually a cleaning person, so the patient is used to having others around. Make sure that family members participate in care on a regular basis and, if possible, have friends take the patient out whenever possible.

If the patient becomes enraged when a service provider or family member is providing respite, understand that this is not uncommon. Insist that you need your time and space. Gently reinforce that staying alone or going with you is not an option. Insist that you will try to find respite workers that the patient likes.

The first time a patient attends day care or is introduced to a new respite worker, stay with him/her during the event. As your loved one becomes accustomed to the day program or respite worker, anger will subside. Successful adaptation to respite will keep your loved one at home longer and will help to keep you from feeling trapped.

5. Aphasia

Loss of language abilities are a usual part of memory loss. Loss of reading comprehension generally occurs first. One of the ways to determine this is if mail starts to pile up or the person begins to pay anything that even resembles a bill. Another clue is when the person either stops reading the paper or can't tell you what they have read.

When the person starts to stumble over words, it is important to understand that they also have trouble understanding what is being said. Talk more slowly using simple phrases. Give the person extra time to respond. Use gestures and point to objects whenever possible.

If the person begins to use words that don't make sense, often called "jargon" or "word salad," try to find bits and pieces that relate to the patient's world. The patient may have good understanding of the world around them, but may simply not be able to express him or herself.

It is acceptable to explore potential meanings with the patient unless frustration begins to rise. If he/she becomes frustrated, distract them to another task and try later. A single consultation with a speech pathologist may be helpful to develop communication strategies.

If the person develops slurred speech or problems swallowing, speak to your physician immediately. The patient may run the risk of aspirating (breathing into their lungs) food or saliva.

6. Made-up stories

One of the more frustrating effects of memory loss is called "confabulation." People with brain diseases, especially those that cause memory loss, tend to have their brains "fill in the blanks" when they can't remember what happens. So, the patients come up with stories that they believe are true. Confabulation is not a lie. It is a story the brain makes up. Trying to correct the patient leads to anger and frustration for you both. A good rule is that anything the patient says is fine – as long as safety is not compromised.

7. Repeated Questions

Patients ask repeated questions for several reasons: they can't remember asking the question; they have no sense of time; and the question asked is not really what they want to know. When your loved one asks a question over and over, most often it has to do with when or where something will happen. One strategy is to write the answer to repeated questions on an index card and have the patient carry it in his/her pocket. When the question is asked you direct the patient to read the card. Here are two general rules for obsessive questions:

(A) Never announce anything more than 24 hours in advance. It leads to obsessive questions.

(B) When a question is asked more than once or twice, ask "Why are you asking?" Then address the underlying concern. Example: The patient asks "What day is it?" You ask "Why do you want to know?" The patient says, "I don't want to miss church." You answer, "I will make sure you get to church on Sunday."

COPING AS A CAREGIVER

As a caregiver you will often have very frustrating moments that will physically and emotionally drain you. It will help you tremendously to cope if you try to remember that this is a physical disease. Some basic principles to follow as you attempt to cope include:

Stay in Communication with Others. Your support group meetings are vital to you. Even if there are times when you don't feel like going or feel discouraged because you did not get something out of the last meeting, continue to go. It is of the utmost importance for you to share your feelings and be in the company of an understanding support group.

Help Others in Trouble. Knowing how exhausted and emotionally drained family members become, it is easy to understand how we can forget others in need. DON'T! There is someone other than your patient who can use a helping hand. It doesn't have to be much. By reaching out, even a little bit, you will find it will help give you more strength.

Retain Control over Your Daily Life. Because of the tremendous exhaustion that comes with being a caregiver, it is very easy to give in and become a passive victim of fate. Don't let this crisis render you powerless. You must remain in charge of yourself, maintaining a sense of your own worth. Devise tangible reminders that you have the ability to direct your life.

Have Confidence in Your Inner Strength. When things start to fall apart, tap that inner source. Within you lies an incredible ability to cope. As you are being tested to what seems the edge of your limit, believe that your endurance will hold up and you will find the strength to go on.

Education. Learn as much as you can about the disease.

Keep stress at a minimum. Get a plastic clown punching bag, or some "Silly Putty" to release your stress.

Don't be afraid to ask for help. Others don't know what you need. Give them a specific task.

Do things for yourself! Try taking a hot bubble bath, or going to a movie.

A sense of humor is your best defense!!!

FLORIDA BRAIN BANK

As you now know, a definite diagnosis of Alzheimer's disease can only be made at autopsy, when the hallmark plaques and tangles can be viewed under a microscope.

FROM THE FLORIDA BRAIN BANK FLYER

In a move to help families of individuals with Alzheimer's disease and other dementias, the State of Florida, through its Alzheimer's Disease Initiative, formed the Brain Bank in 1987. Its purpose is to study the brains of individuals with progressive dementia, to provide the family with a definitive diagnosis, and to acquire brain tissue for research. Through a network of researchers we share common goals of finding a cure, improving diagnostic tools and treatment options, and providing education.

As members of the Brain Bank team, we realize that choosing to participate in this program may be a difficult decision even if your family member is an organ donor. We are sensitive to your concerns and are here to help you with this decision.

At present, the only way to get an accurate diagnosis of Alzheimer's disease or related dementia disorder is a brain autopsy at the time of death. The diagnoses are a critical piece of your family's medical history and will become important to your children and grandchildren as new treatments become available.

Only by your participation in the Brain Bank program will our researchers have the brain tissue required to learn the cause of the numerous dementias. With your decision to become part of the Brain Bank program, there is hope that these diseases will become preventable or at least treatable in the near future.

PARTICIPANTS MUST BE PRE-REGISTERED

It is important to plan ahead as a comprehensive application must be completed and medical records collected, especially from the neurologist and/or other specialists who made the initial diagnosis. This process takes time but the information is necessary for the neuropathologist to determine the final diagnoses in each case and also to provide supporting information for research. Upon the death of the patient a final pathology report will be provided to the family and the patient's physicians and the brain tissue will become available to researchers worldwide.

A caregiver's words:

"Thank you for giving my mother her last hoorah, a gift to science, a gift to our future."

DEMENTIA CARE AND CURE INITIATIVE

MISSION: To engage communities across the state to be more dementia friendly, promote better care for Floridians affected by dementia, and support research efforts to find a cure. Different font than rest of manual

VISION: To see all Florida communities engaged in providing better care for those affected by dementia while we work towards a cure.

Background:

Dementia is a comprehensive term for a decline in mental ability that is severe enough to interfere with daily life. The most common and well-known type of dementia is Alzheimer's disease. Other forms of dementia include, but are not limited to Lewy Body dementia and vascular dementia. Currently, Alzheimer's disease is the 6th leading cause leading cause of death in Americans age 65 or older.

With approximately 510,000 individuals currently living with Alzheimer's disease, Florida has the second highest incidence of Alzheimer's in the nation – only behind California. Florida is projected to have more than 720,000 individuals with Alzheimer's in the next 10 years. These figures do not include other forms of dementia or the hundreds of thousands who serve as caregivers.

Florida seeks to lead the nation in response to the increasing incidence of dementia by implementing a statewide effort to become more dementia friendly – taking action to support those diagnosed with dementia and their caregivers – bettering communities and the state overall.

Goals:

1) Increase awareness of dementia, services, and supports

Accomplished through education events, the media, and joint efforts with community leadership and stakeholders, including partnering state agencies.

2) Develop community work plans

Action-oriented plans will be individualized for Caring Communities. Toolkits will assist communities to assess their individual needs and execute specific actions to improve their region.

3) Promote care and cure programs

Advocating for the funding of programs that care for both those diagnosed with dementia and their caregivers, as well as research efforts that work toward a cure

FINANCIAL ASSISTANCE

Financing long term care services for a person with Alzheimer’s disease can be very expensive. Following are a few fundamentals regarding obtaining financial assistance to cover the cost of care. The most important thing to understand is that Medicare does not pay for long-term custodial care in a nursing home. Generally, custodial care is paid by personal savings, long-term care insurance, or Medicaid, a joint state and federal program that will pay most nursing home costs for people who are income eligible (limited income and resources). Below is a chart providing some of the basics facts about these two government insurance programs. (Source: Medicare Basics, 2006, Centers for Medicare & Medicaid).

Medicare	Medicaid
Medicare is the federal health insurance program for people age 65+. You are automatically enrolled when you begin receiving Social Security benefits. Medicare pays for short-term skilled nursing care if ordered by a physician. Under limited conditions, Medicare will pay some nursing home costs such as when a patient needs skilled nursing or rehabilitation services after a hospital stay. Medicare does not pay long-term custodial care in a nursing home. Medicare Part A – hospital insurance that pays for inpatient hospital stays, care in a skilled nursing facility, hospice care, and some home health care. Medicare Part B – medical insurance that helps pay for doctors’ services, outpatient hospital care, durable medical equipment, and some medical services that aren’t covered by Part A.	Medicaid is a joint federal and state funded program that helps with medical costs for some people with limited income and resources. You have to apply for Medicaid and be determined eligible. A person can have both Medicaid and Medicare insurance. Medicaid will pay most nursing home costs for people with limited income and resources (must be a Medicaid-certified facility). This kind of coverage is called the Medicaid Institutional Care Program (Medicaid ICP).

Typically, Senior Transitions does not provide actual hands-on care for the older person, but instead arranges, coordinates and monitors this care to be provided by the most qualified professionals available. Senior Transitions may draw from a number of options to assist this process. Due to our knowledge of the local providers and accessibility to specialized resources, we are able to provide solid and reliable recommendations.

HOME HEALTH CARE SERVICES

In-home health care services are medically oriented services provided in the home by medical professionals. Medicare, Medicaid, other third party insurers and private pay are the usual forms of payment. For Medicare to cover services, they must be ordered by a physician. There are many home health care agencies in Leon and neighboring counties that can be located in the telephone directory under "Home Health Care." All home health agencies must be licensed by the State of Florida. Some agencies also hold certification from the Joint Commission Accreditation of Healthcare Organizations (JCAHO). The licensure status of any facility required to have a license in the state of Florida can be checked on the Web by visiting the Agency for Health Care Administration’s Website at ahca.myflorida.com, or by calling the Agency (888) 419-3456.

Elder Helpline. 800- 963-5337

This statewide resource is operated by trained and certified Information and Referral Specialists, and serves as a starting point for those seeking information about programs and services for older adults, individuals with disabilities, and caregivers.

LEGAL RESOURCES

(Attorney, Guardianship, etc.)

There are several reasons a caregiver might need legal assistance. It is best when families can discuss financial, healthcare and end-of-life issues while the person with Alzheimer's is still able to participate and make his or her wishes known. Planning for the future can involve the making of a will, establishing a trust, life estate planning, as well as researching a power of attorney, guardianship, and/or any health care advance directive that might be needed. Private counsel already familiar with your legal affairs is a good resource. There are also specialists available, such as Board Certified Elder Law Attorneys, who are experts in the areas of financial and health-related legal actions. Below are several legal resources for caregivers. Local telephone directories also provide listings of attorneys by specialty areas (check under "elder law").

ASSISTED LIVING FACILITIES

Assisted Living Facilities (ALFs) provide an alternative to more medically based settings for individuals who need housing and supportive services, but who do not need 24-hour nursing supervision. Housing, meals, personal care services and supportive services are provided in a congregate (group) living situation. Personal services include assistance with bathing, eating, grooming, dressing, walking, and housekeeping, supervision of self-administered medication, and arrangement of social and leisure activities.

To be able to live in an ALF, a person must meet "residency criteria" which is defined by Florida statute and regulation, and facility policy. An ALF licensed for extended congregate care (ECC) may provide additional nursing services and additional assistance with personal care services. Residents living in ECC licensed facilities may have higher impairment levels than those living in an ALF. In addition to ECC, there are two other "specialty" licenses: limited nursing services (LNS) and limited mental health (LMH). ALFs wishing to serve individuals with certain psychiatric impairments who receive a state supplement must obtain a limited mental health license. Some ALFs have special units for the care of Alzheimer's and other dementia individuals.

While ALFs generally cost less than nursing facilities, the cost of an ALF varies greatly depending on the location, size of the residential unit, amenities, and services provided by the facility. It is important to understand the types of services a facility provides, those services included in the basic rate, and those services requiring additional payment. The majority of residents living in ALFs pay privately, however the Assisted Living Medicaid Waiver Program can pay for services for eligible residents living in assisted living facilities who would otherwise need nursing home placement. To be eligible, a resident must meet financial and functional criteria.

On the following pages, this symbol will indicate whether a particular facility offers services oriented towards those with memory impairment.  = Memory Care

Tallahassee, FL 32308.....www.claritypointe.com

Your Life Tallahassee has been designed entirely to provide residents with a peaceful, easy-to-navigate environment that’s simultaneously supportive and secure. The community offers four neighborhoods that are home to residents with similar care needs. Warm and welcoming, each neighborhood features open floor plans with spacious, private resident suites, as well as inviting common areas.

ADULT FAMILY CARE HOMES

Adult Family Care Homes provide fully supervised, family-type living in a private home. Care includes room, board, and personal care for those elderly and disabled who can no longer live independently; a home’s ability to care for persons with dementia is individual and situational. Adult Family Care Homes are monitored by the State; however, a license is not required with two or less residents. The licensure status of any facility required to have a license in Florida can be checked on the Web by visiting the Agency for Health Care Administration’s Website at <http://floridahealthfinder.gov/index.html>, or by calling the Agency at (850) 487-2515.

SUPPORT GROUPS

Many people have found that the most effective way to learn how to care for a person with Alzheimer's, as well as cope with the emotional strain that accompanies caregiving, is through a support group. We encourage family, friends and professional caregivers to participate in such a group and benefit from an atmosphere of shared learning. Information is shared about management of problem behavior, general care and available services.

THERAPEUTIC SERVICES

(Physical Therapy, Speech-Language Therapy & Occupational Therapy)

As important members of the health care team, physical, speech, and occupational therapists are sometimes overlooked. Therapists are able to assess the current abilities of a person with AD and devise ways to help the person remain independent for as long as possible. They can serve the caregiver by directly offering training and education (e.g. incontinence education, falls prevention, physical activities). Speech language pathologists may provide evaluations to determine ways to help caregivers communicate more effectively with a person with dementia. They are also excellent consultants on matters of eating, swallowing, and choking. Medicare and other insurance often pay for these services. In addition to the resources listed below, your physician may order therapeutic services through a home health agency or nurse registry. See the section on home health care for a list of these agencies.

Wanderer’s Identification & Recovery Programs

Leon County Project Lifesaver Program

Leon County is fortunate to have a proactive wanderer’s identification programs. The goal of this program is to locate and return disoriented persons to their caregivers; to reduce the time that disoriented persons are away from their protected environment; and to reduce the trauma experienced by both the disoriented person and their caregiver in these situations.

Alzheimer’s Project, Inc. (850) 386-2778

Project Lifesaver relies on proven radio technology and a specially trained search and rescue team. Persons enrolled in the program wear a personalized wristband that emits a tracking signal. This program is a rapid-response, proactive partnership with local law enforcement aiding those suffering from Alzheimer’s disease, and related disorders such as Down’s syndrome and autism. The program is sponsored by the Leon County Sheriff’s Office, Pilot Club of Tallahassee, and Alzheimer’s Project, Inc.

There is no cost to participate in the program. The Project Lifesaver Coordinator will conduct a specialized assessment and complete the enrollment information. A picture will be taken and attached to the Project Lifesaver information which is maintained both at Alzheimer’s Project and the 9-1-1 dispatch unit at the Leon County Sheriff’s Office. Each participant will be fitted with a Project Lifesaver bracelet and will be assigned a unique transmitter code. The participant will receive visits from a trained Project Lifesaver volunteer, every 2 months, who will replace the transmitter battery. For more information, please contact Alzheimer’s Project, Inc. at (850) 386-2778.

Scent Evidence K9.....(850) 272-6950

info@scentevidencek9.com and scentevidencek9.com

Scent Evidence K9 is a Tallahassee based international provider of effective scent discriminate systems and services that enable responders to find missing persons and bring them home safely. Former FBI Forensic Canine Operations Specialist, Paul Coley, founded the company in 2012 to develop a line of scent preservation products and specialized K9 training techniques that would increase location success while decreasing recovery time.

Area Agency on Aging for North Florida (AAA) (850) 488-0055
2414 Mahan Dr., Tallahassee, FL 32308 Elder Helpline (850) 963-5337

The Area Agency on Aging for North Florida, Inc./Aging and Disability Resource Center (AAA/ADRC), a non-profit organization has been working with local aging network providers in fourteen counties for over 35 years to coordinate a continuum of care for older adults and individuals with disabilities to facilitate aging in place in the latest restrictive setting. Funded in large part by the State of Florida Department of Elder Affairs, the AAA/ADRC administers a variety of home and community-based programs including Community Care for the Elderly, Alzheimer’s disease Initiative, and Home Care for the Elderly.

The AAA/ADRC is also legislatively charged with the responsibility of being the main entry point into the long-term care system under the Statewide Medicaid Managed Care Long-term Care program (SMMCLTCP).

CARES District Offices (850) 414-9803
2B Department of Elder Affairs, 4040 Esplanade Way, Ste 380 Tallahassee, FL 32399

CARES 2A Office..... (850)747-5840

CARES (Comprehensive Assessment and Review for Long-Term Care Services) is a free service to help people determine the best way to care for themselves when in need of long-term care. CARES staff (a team of registered nurses and/or social workers) perform on-site, comprehensive assessment to determine long-term care needs and recommend services best suited to the individual’s needs. Recommended services may take place in a community setting, a nursing home, or at home. The goal of CARES is for individuals to remain in the community as long as it is safe and practical with the assistance of services such as home-delivered meals, homemaker services, transportation, personal care, home health care, adult day services, etc.

Department of Elder Affairs (850) 414-2000
4040 Esplanade Way, Tallahassee, FL 32399-7000

The Department of Elder Affairs oversees the dissemination of funds for research, training, and service demonstration projects for the Alzheimer’s Disease Initiative. Components of the initiative include thirteen Memory Disorder clinics, model day care for Alzheimer’s patients in select locations, and respite care in all 67 Florida counties. The Memory Disorder Clinics are also excellent resources for families seeking a diagnosis. They have expert medical teams that can determine if a person has a probable Alzheimer’s diagnosis or perhaps some other disorder that may be treatable.

Elder Care Services (850) 921-5554
2518 West Tennessee Street, Tallahassee, FL 32304

Elder Care Services provides a variety of in-home and community-based services to people 60 years of age and older. Programs/services include: community care for the elderly, home care for the elderly and Alzheimer’s Disease Initiative Program.

Alzheimer Disease Initiative Program: services may include case management, respite, chore, homemaker, personal care, medical transportation, emergency alert phone systems, and other limited services.

Meals on Wheels: A hot noon meal is delivered Monday through Friday by a corps of 400 Volunteers. For homebound elders who cannot shop or cook, or should not cook, as well as those who cannot afford a nutritious diet, the MOW Program is key to remaining independent in their own home. Rural seniors are provided weekly frozen meals to supplement their diet. The added benefit of a daily “safety check” by the volunteer cannot be overstated. For frail, homebound elders, these meals are the lifeline that allows them to remain in their homes rather than going to a nursing home.

General United Way Services: Telephone reassurance, medical equipment loan, food bank for seniors, and eyeglass assistance.

Tallahassee Senior Center (850) 891-4000

1400 North Monroe Street, Tallahassee, FL 32303

Education, recreation, and wellness activities and classes for active, independent adults are available each month at the center or a satellite site. Participants can choose from fitness and wellness classes, several types of dance, all mediums of art, crafts, foreign languages, and computer classes. Cards and games include duplicate bridge, canasta, mahjongg, and Wii bowling. A Senior Resource Coordinator connects participants and caregivers with partner agencies and community resources to meet their varied needs. Local service providers offer mental health, financial, legal, and insurance counseling. Lunch, provided by Elder Care Services (ECS) for seniors age 60 and older, is served Monday-Friday on a donation basis. Special events include Capital City Senior Games, TALL-Tallahassee Active Lifelong Leaders, and L3X Lifelong Learning. Individuals must be able to function independently or be accompanied by a caregiver at all times. Most activities are $2; some classes and outings cost more. Tours of the center are available between 9a.m. and 4p.m. Monday-Friday. Descriptions and times of the classes and activities are available at talgov.com/seniors or by calling the center.

AUTOPSY INFORMATION

Because a definite diagnosis of Alzheimer's disease can only be determined post-mortem, an autopsy is important so that families can have complete medical records. If other family members develop dementia, an autopsy confirmed diagnosis of previous cases can be essential for any early treatment. Families may also want to consider brain tissue donations to research in order to gain a greater understanding of this catastrophic disease.

WORDS TO LIVE BY FROM A PERSON LIVING WITH DEMENTIA

Treat the individual living with dementia in the gift of the present, not in the past or the future....rather in the present moment. Dr. Sandy Halperin

What a person living with dementia would tell you if they could.

You know what makes me feel safe, secure, and happy? A smile.

Did you ever consider this? When you get tense and uptight it makes me feel tense and uptight.

Instead of getting all bent out of shape when I do something that seems perfectly normal to me, and perfectly nutty to you, why not just smile at me? It will take the edge off the situation all the way around.

Please try to understand and remember it is my short term memory, my right now memory, that is gone -- don't talk so fast, or use so many words.

You know what I am going to say if you go off into long winded explanations on why we should do something? I am going to say No, because I can never be certain if you are asking me to do something I like, or drink a bottle of Castor oil. So I'll just say No to be safe.

Slow down. And don't sneak up on me and start talking. Did I tell you I like smiles?

Make sure you have my attention before you start blabbering away. What is going to happen if you start blabbering away and you don't have my attention, or confuse me? I am going to say No - count on it.

My attention span and ability to pay attention are not as good as they once were, please make eye contact with me before you start talking. A nice smile always gets my attention. Did I mention that before?

Sometimes you talk to me like I am a child or an idiot. How would you like it if I did that to you? Go to your room and think about this. Don't come back and tell me you are sorry, I won't know what you are talking about. Just stop doing it and we will get along very well, and probably better than you think.

You talk too much, instead try taking my hand and leading the way. I need a guide not a person to nag me all the time.

Quality of life shouldn't be measured in dollars and cents.

Elmcroft is designed to provide the specialized memory care support our residents need, at prices that will make everyone feel more comfortable.
